Success

How do we measure success is it getting the job? Getting to the interview or leaving an interview knowing that you were really prepared and that whatever the result you feel good about yourself,

It is any or all of the above.

So I was really excited when a client who lacked self-confidence and avoided answering questions was successful in getting the job they wanted, They rang to tell me the good news and how they had changed their approach to interviews. However the nicest thing was shortly after starting I received an email telling me how much they liked the new job and the employer.

Tips

2005 is almost upon us, so it's time to start thinking about your New Year's Resolutions. Why not add career goals to your list? Our tips will help you start the New Year ready for the next step.

- First think about what you'd like to achieve in the coming year. Spend time reflecting on past achievements and consider what the next step could be. Write down some possible options.
- While enjoying a well deserved rest over Christmas, take time to do a mini skills audit. This will help you focus on your next move, be it a promotion or a new career.
- When you apply for jobs always attach a cover letter highlighting the skills and/or experience you have which match the job requirements.

Have a great break and come back refreshed and focused for the New Year!
